

Human Trials: Testing the AIDS Vaccine

Last Updated Thursday, 21 June 2007

For three years in Vancouver, Canada, a group of gay men challenged HIV, on behalf of a world at risk. They are part of the first-ever human trials of an AIDS vaccine. This is the story of three of those men— ALAN, NEIL and DAVID.

{slide=Watch Trailer}{tab=Excerpt}{youtube}UURd1knYGtU{/youtube}{tab=Featurette}Special Featurette from the DVD{youtube}Bg_tt2b04y0{/youtube}{/tabs}{/slide}
Purchase in the Store

AIDS is not gay. AIDS is not African. It's global. Today 40 million people live with the disease worldwide. Six thousand children are infected every day. It is a plague beyond anything in human experience. By being part of this trial, Alan, Neil and David could save millions of lives.

Running Time: 40 minutes

Credits
Producer: Tony Papa
Directors: Ryan Marley & Michael Margolis
Writer: Helen Slinger

Produced in Association with:
CBC Newsworld, CBC Radio-Canada, PrideVision TV, Telefilm: Equity Investment Program, Canadian Television Fund:
License Fee Program CanWest Western Independent Producers Fund, British Columbia Film